

An Unfortunate Arrangement, Vol. 1 of 2 (Classic Reprint)

June morning in the window of my room where I had been breakfasting, and looking out over the Thames at the tall shot towers, the brewery lion, and the Waterloo Road chimney pots which were unusually distinct against the blue sky and sunlight, while the water was all dazzling ripples, and the Waterloo Bridge looked large, strong, hard, and white. I had a bow-window with a seat round it, so ;J that I could sit and look out front, right, and left, ,which is a pleasant thing to do after breakfast, with .the window open, just when all the busy people are becoming especially busy, just when the principals Vy VOL.
