If your closest work friend had died. If you had started a new job If that job turned out to be A little odd Would that be the kind of thing that could happen just to anyone at all, or would there be another reason a reason that may take more than just a little unearthing to reveal well, more like excavating than unearthing Featuring the theoretical cat*, the Thoughts of chairman Bob and the existential mouse, Anyone will take you on a journey unlike any other. * There will be blue egg thinking. Conundrums with regards as how exactly to learn about your room, dark matter, nuclear fission and the advantages of having a friend called Mister Cheesy. So reboot the Enid and Doris engine, grab an unusually fresh sandwich from Mr Hinnertys corner shop (motto: we sell everything and he actually seems to) and follow me on a journey that may - or may not make you rethink the way you look at the here, the hereafter and everything else in between.**

*Theoretically, anyway.  Not really Bob as such. May contain smiting.  Irish. Swears like a trouper. (This is not mutually inclusive by the way.) *Not suitable for the over religious or owners of the latest Tom Jones calendar. Not like nuclear fusion at all. The bus fare for example, is horrendous.  Yes. There is an in between, though the weather is apparently terrible. Lightning etc. all of the time.

From the author of Paul McCartneys Coat and Other Stories and Liverpool, Anyone is the latest novel in an increasingly difficult to categorise stories from Michael White. A sense of humour may most definitely be required.
