

FIFTY CENTS FOR YOUR SOUL

FIFTY CENTS FOR YOUR SOUL
Inspired by events that occurred during the filming of The Exorcist! Frannie Rosens psychic mentions a brilliant future, but she never tells the relatively straight-laced and naïve Frannie that she will be possessed by a promiscuous, stage-struck doppelganger. All Frannie wants is an Oscar-winning role. What she gets is far more than that, especially when she's cast in a horror film about demonic possession, directed by the legendary Victor Madison. Although piloted by Madison, Frannie is also orchestrated by a doppelganger/demon. She has been chosen for her role, and there is more involved than a doppelganger's dream of stardom! Victor Madison is universally and deservedly hated, yet unexpectedly irresistible to Frannie. His murder surprises no one but Frannie. His killer is a surprise to everyone but Frannie. But then, only Frannie is threatened by disembodied voices and a reality she knows cannot be real. PRAISE FOR FIFTY CENTS FOR YOUR SOUL: Marilyn Monroe once said, Hollywood is a place where they'll pay you a thousand dollars for a kiss, and fifty cents for your soul, and mystery writer Denise Dietz takes that premise and runs with it, producing a swiftly paced and truly scary supernatural novel about Frannie Rosen, an ambitious young actress who finds her soul in jeopardy when she lands a major roll in a celebrated yet sinister director's horror movie. Creature Feature The over-the-top, irreverent serving of horror and Hollywood noir in FIFTY CENTS FOR YOUR SOUL is something of a departure for Dietz (Footprints in the Butter, etc.), but who can resist a book that opens with: The woman who straddled Victor Madison had hiccups? Publishers Weekly An explosion of sex, religion and demons wrapped up in a feast of sharp, black humor. Highly Recommended! Murder on the Woo Woo Express Frannie Rosens voice sounds something like a young Bette Midler if shed been cast in an episode of Sex and the City directed by Tim Burton. Michael Arnzen, The Goreletter
