

Love-Lust-Kink #24 8 Books on Physical & Spiritual Beauty, Fashion, Cosmetics & Grooming

As a philosophical concept, beauty refers to anything that brings a sense of liking, attraction and awe to the viewer. For people, there is outer beauty and inner beauty. Inner beauty means that a person is good, nice, gentle, compassionate and loving. Outer beauty within people is simple to me. You look at someone. They not only have the grace of youth such that they look healthy and wholesome but they have a fresh vitality about them, kind of like a spring in their step. That's the universal version of beauty but beauty is also in the eyes of the beholder. We perceive people as beautiful who are like us even if others don't think they're beautiful. I have a friend who is kind of a nerdy druggie who likes to get high. He met a nerdy recreational drug user like himself and fell in love with her but she's not my idea of a beautiful woman. We have a spontaneous, intuitive judgment standard within ourselves. We look at somebody. If we think they're beautiful, something goes deep into our souls and sends a lightning bolt through our senses. It happened to me when I was younger a number of times. Now that I'm old and cynical, it rarely happens that I see someone and think they're a beautiful specimen of humanity because I think everybody is corrupt and brainwashed by the frivolous junk of the world as opposed to trying to be what they feel inside. The search for eternal youth is the search for eternal beauty. The Picture of Dorian Grey by Oscar Wilde is about the joke of being alive as a human being. No matter how beautiful, vibrant and young you are, you will get old, ugly, wrinkled, tired and maybe fat. It's the same as Solomon lamenting on old age in Ecclesiastes. We live in a society where I see infomercials selling creams at crazy prices touting them as anti-aging formulas. All creams are the same. There is no magic formula for youth. They're trying to make people bionic so they can live longer with nanotechnology and prosthetics. The only way to keep the outer look vibrant is to exercise and eat healthy foods but there are limits to the body. Your body will age.

You can keep the beauty in your soul if you dont let the world harden you but most people end up seeing so much hate and evil that they harden to the simple beauty of life. All I ask of living is that it doesnt change the simple, innocent, curious kid I was, open to life. Western society is hooked on artificially enhancing natural facial and body beauty which is fair game. It all goes back to the fallen angels in the Book of Enoch. One of them taught the human race about enhancing the facial look with make-up and jewelry. How much is good before it becomes vanity? There is the self-respect of taking care of yourself to be healthy and wholesome but beyond that, everything is pretense. You are who you are and thats it. Wise people look at someone and see their essence. Make-up, clothes and jewelry dont change it. Wise people know when someone is going heavy on the fashion and cosmetics. I look at someone and try to see their life imprint on their face, body and soul. If theres too much external stuff there, I see right through it. Its so obvious. If someone is trying too hard to be beautiful, even if theyre aging, it defeats the purpose because true beauty is natural. If youre aging, accept who you are. Thats the way you were created to be. The strong dark male gorilla becomes a silverback, is eventually dethroned and walks off, the fallen champion. It happens to everyone. I know women who were beautiful as young ladies now I cant even recognize them. Ive seen several on facebook. If you color your hair, it makes you look like a vain jerk. It takes something away from you being you. People see an element of phoniness to you. If youre off-center and out of harmony, cosmetics, cosmetic surgery, expensive clothes or purses wont help you. You either have beauty or you dont. Yo
