

H. P. Lovecraft in the Merrimack Valley

For decades, David Goudsward has been a leading authority on the obscurer historical and topographical corners of his native New England. In this lavish and detailed treatise, he has written the definitive treatment of Lovecrafts connections with the Merrimack Valley of coastal Massachusetts and New Hampshire. Goudsward traces Lovecrafts initial visits in the 1920s to such towns as Newburyport, Haverhill, and Hampstead, where he met such colleagues as Charles W. Tryout Smith, Myrta Alice Little, and Edgar J. Davis. Later visits clearly inspired many of the topographical features in such tales as The Shadow over Innsmouth and The Shadow out of Time. Goudsward has made a profound study of Lovecrafts letters and other documents in tracing the Providence writers movements in the area and the impressions he drew from it. This book is lavishly illustrated with dozens of photographs of the locale, including many vivid period snapshots that show the towns and other landmarks as they would have been seen by Lovecraft himself. Goudsward also treats the possibility that Lovecraft visited Mystery Hill, a megalithic site that some scholars believe inspired The Dunwich Horror. H. P. Lovecraft in the Merrimack Valley is an exhaustive treatment of a subject that has rarely been discussed before, but that is of crucial importance to H. P. Lovecrafts life and imagination.
