

Cartoony Justice

Its Saturday morning. Time for the Dead End Show, everybodys favourite cartoon program. Hosted by Linda and Dead End Cat, with special guest star Diane, the Vitamin Queen. Its Saturday morning and Stella is trying to sleep. When she is rudely awakened, she tunes in to watch the Dead End Show but instead finds an infernally boring film about bananas? Something nefarious is going on here and Stella is determined to get to the bottom of it. And considering that Stella is the most powerful sorceress on Earth, nobody in his right mind would stand in her way. Frederick J. Waardehem PhD has not been in his right mind for a long time now. What is more, he really hates Saturday morning cartoons. They are loud and crude and violent and have absolutely no educational value at all. Which is why they should be banned. After all, wont someone think of the children? Waardehem has persuaded the TV station to cancel the Dead End Show and replace it with educational and wholesome programming, starting with Waardehems personal favourite, a documentary about bananas. But trouble is heading for Frederick J. Waardehem. Trouble in the form of Stella, mighty mistress of magic, and her friend Diane, Vitamin queen and alien amazon warrior. Theyre angry, theyve got magic and they will soon make Waardehem regret his banana fixation. This is a 5300 word short story of cartoons and talking pigs, singing bananas, flying anvils and magic.
