

Kung-fu Heroes of Destiny

Told across seven centuries and two books, Kung-fu Heroes of Destiny is the story of immortal heroes whose destiny it is to bring peace or destruction to the world. From the Wudang monastery of Song dynasty China to the back garden of a modern American home, an ancient tree blooms once every thousand years to bear the fruit of immortality. Only the worthy are destined to taste it. The Hero Tree of Destiny

In the Wudang monastery in Song Dynasty China, there was an ancient plum tree that had not bloomed in living memory. When it finally does, thirteen children born in the city of Shiyan are chosen by Destiny to one day compete for the right to eat the fruit of immortality. The Hero Tree of Destiny is a Wuxia novel of ancient Chinese kung-fu heroes. Thirteen children are trained by the Taoist monks of Wudang, as well as a surviving immortal from the last flowering, and one grimy old beggar, to become the finest martial artists in the land, so that when the fruit of the Hero Tree finally ripens, they will battle to determine who is worthy to join the ranks of the immortal heroes of China. The Dragons White Eyebrow Jon Lu is a disabled Marine veteran of Americas Middle Eastern adventures. His best friend, Craig White, is a drifting slacker with a love for Chinese martial arts and Chinese girls. When their friend Tommy Toombs disappears, they set out to find him with the help of some unlikely heroes, including Jons peculiar grandfather, Lao Ye. Their path leads them into a mystical realm called the Dragons Dream, where they must confront a powerful sorceress known only as The Princess. The Dragons White Eyebrow is the second book in the Kung-Fu Heroes of Destiny series, which began with Hero Tree of Destiny. The story concludes with Lao Yes Garden, where we discover how the Hero Tree of Destiny and the Dragons White Eyebrow share a connection across 600
