

Momoir of the feel good flu 4

This is book 4 in the series of The feel good fulA chronicle written by one of the 10% still alive, about the apocalyptic events that brought our world as we knew it to an end, and how some tried to survive in its wastelands and start over again, to build a new society. This diary keep by the main character tells of the plague that killed 90% of the world, and left one city with about 500 to find a new way to survive. In it he recalls a weak of high adventure and danger, as he works to secure the welfare of his family and others, from wild animals, raiders, warlords and the decay of law and safety. This is about a new warrior that makes changes in how things are, with as much passion as he makes love, and his wife that keeps both in line. A new city jungle complete with wild life and vines, 5 years after the apocalypse is the setting, and the top gun is taking care of business.
