

The Trouble With Werewolves (The Department Series Book 1)

Listen up rookies, Im going to keep this short, and Im going to keep this simple. If youre going to be an agent for the Australian Department of Unusual Events, then you need to know how to deal with werewolves. And werewolves, rookies, are not pleasant creatures to deal with. The average werewolf is seven feet tall and weighs roughly two hundred and fifty kilograms. The average werewolf also wants nothing more than to rip your face off and eat you for dinner. If you want to beat a werewolf, you cant afford to fight fair. No, you cheat you cheat as much as you bloody can. If that means sneaking up on it and putting a silver bullet in the back of its head with a sniper rifle, then thats what you do. But Im not going to waste your time by telling you what you already know. Im not going to tell you about a mission where everything went right. Im going to tell you about a mission where things went wrong because things always go wrong and learning how to deal with that is the only way youll last more than a year or two in the Department. So pay attention and take notes. It could save your life.
