

Three Graces

Carys Miller doesn't believe in the aristocracy nor does she believe in the supernatural. So, when she finds herself married to Richard Bretton, 12th Duke of Cuthland, and living in his haunted house, she wonders if she's going mad. As the new mistress of Amberley Court, Carys discovers she's now in charge of a house the size of a small village. And, as if that isn't enough to be getting on with, she finds herself in the most unpopular of roles: a stepmother to young Cecily and Evie.

Carys desperately needs help but she doesn't expect it to come from an eighteenth-century duchess who simply refuses to leave Amberley. Three Graces is a romantic fantasy about mothers, daughters, lovers and ghosts, and how the past always manages to find its way into the present. * * * Praise for Victoria Connelly: Great fun. A real page-turner. Andrew Davies, screenwriter of Pride and Prejudice Sunshine on a rainy day. A charmingly written slice of warm-hearted escapism. Lisa Jewell A lovely feel-good story. Katie Fforde Victoria writes with a deliciously light touch and joyous enthusiasm. Fiona Walker Fun, amusing and heart-warming. Trashionista Unashamedly romantic.
